Last review: January 2022 | Next review: January 2025

The Democracy School is committed to minimising the impact of its operations on the environment.

The key points of its strategy to achieve this are the following:

- Minimise waste in all its forms both by encouraging recycling and by ensuring that all operations are as efficiently run as possible.
- Actively experiment with new ways of working (home working, hot desking etc) that further minimise the School's environmental impact.
- Offer staff training to raise awareness of environmental issues and enlist staff support in improving the School's performance.
- Promote the School's environmental policy amongst staff, fellows and associates, as well as amongst its clients, suppliers and other stakeholders.
- Meet and exceed all environmental legislation relating to the School.
